DRAGONFLY BEAUTÉ

PERFUME CONCENTRATION AND STRENGTHS EXPLAINED

The main difference between fragrances is their strength. The higher the concentration, the more prominent the scent is and the longer it lasts. You'll also notice a difference in scent complexity.

When shopping for fragrances, you will come across five main types of fragrance.

EAU DE PARFUM (EDP)

The majority of best-selling women's fragrances are Eau de Parfums. EDP is a more potent fragrance than eau de toilette but weaker than parfum. It has around 12%-20% of concentrated fragrance oils per bottle. It's an excellent choice if you want a scent that isn't too overwhelming for everyday usage but can also be worn at night.

On average, expect an EDP to last about 5-8 hours.

EAU DE TOILETTE (EDT)

Eau de Toilette (EDT) has a lower concentration of perfume oils and tends to be more affordable than Eau de Parfum (EDP) and Parfum. It has around 10%-15% of perfume oils per bottle.

These scents typically have a fresher daily wear fragrance but often only last for a short time since they have a lower alcohol percentage. You will need to reapply more often.

PARFUM

These fragrances are bound to leave an impression when you enter a room full of complex notes. They are also known as extrait de parfum.

Expect parfum to have a highly concentrated content, varying between 20%-40% depending on the chosen brand. Parfum lasts long on the skin, so a little goes a long way.

EAU FRAICHE

Eau Fraiche is a light fragrance containing only 2-3% concentrated perfume oil. We would class this as more of a body spritz or a refresher to keep you smelling good throughout the day.

EAU DE COLOGNE

Many people assume the German-originating cologne is for male scents. However, you can also find feminine colognes. Instead, Cologne refers to a light, refreshing fragrance containing around 2%-5% of perfume oil.

You can wear cologne as a spritzer or a fragrance, but you must reapply often.

PARFUM

These fragrances are bound to leave an impression when you enter a room full of complex notes. They are also known as extrait de parfum.

Expect parfum to have a highly concentrated content, varying between 20%-40% depending on the chosen brand. Parfum lasts long on the skin, so a little goes a long way.

EAU FRAICHE

Eau Fraiche is a light fragrance containing only 2-3% concentrated perfume oil. We would class this as more of a body spritz or a refresher to keep you smelling good throughout the day.

EAU DE COLOGNE

Many people assume the German-originating cologne is for male scents. However, you can also find feminine colognes. Instead, Cologne refers to a light, refreshing fragrance containing around 2%-5% of perfume oil.

You can wear cologne as a spritzer or a fragrance, but you must reapply often.
